Warren Kane, CEO created his vision of the future for wireless broadband by opening B2X OnLine in June of 2002. With a technical background in computing and electronics Warren continues to build on his impressive knowledge base. His outstanding computer skills caught Microsoft's attention and he was invited to their site as a special beta tester for the MS Site Server. Deciding factors in the selection process were Warren's skill set in Microsoft NT, UNIX networking, MS Internet Information Server, Networking background and basic knowledge of the Internet. He was the only one selected out of the Tampa Bay Area. His programming skills brought him to consult with many large companies; Such as AOL Time Warner, Intel, Home Shopping, 1-800-flowers and many others. Warren's skills grew with the real life experience gained in creating and managing several technology-based companies. One of the most noticeable was URnet.com, Inc. a Florida based business, spanned 7 years and preceded B2X Online, Inc. URnet.com, Inc. was an Internet hosting and development company, which grew to host over 300 web sites and support over 500 clients. In March of 2001 Warren and his brother Danny Kane were invited to Motorola to be one of the first in the nation to be certified with their new offering of Canopy. Warren's system knowledge, Internet experience and business history launches B2X Online, Inc. with a solid foundation and the promise of rapid growth. This successful meld of management and know-how will give B2X OnLine customers the speed, reliability and integrity they need and at a price below current industry standards.
